TAX INFORMATION

The following is a summary of some of the federal income tax consequences that you should consider before electing to participate in the Program. The summary is not intended to be complete. Tax laws may change and the Company is not responsible for individual tax consequences. There also may be state and local taxes to consider. We urge you to consult your accountant or other tax advisors regarding the tax consequences of participating in the Program. The Internal Revenue Service has published notices that explain the tax treatment of adoption expenses in greater detail.

The Company is required to withhold FICA (Social Security and Medicare) taxes and FUTA (federal unemployment) taxes on any qualified adoption expense reimbursements paid through this Program. Federal income taxes will not be withheld on qualified adoption expense reimbursements paid through the Program. These reimbursements may or may not be exempt from state income tax. A special box on your Form W-2 will show the total amount of qualified adoption expenses reimbursed by the Company.

Expenses reimbursed under this Program may not be excludable from your taxable income if your "modified adjusted gross income" for the year exceeds certain limits. (The following income amounts were published by the IRS for the 2020 tax year. These amounts may be adjusted by the IRS in future years. Please consult your tax advisor or the IRS for current income limits.) Generally, taxpayers with modified adjusted gross income of $254,520 or more must include all reimbursed amounts in their income. Taxpayers with modified adjusted gross income between $214,520 and $254,520 will only be permitted to exclude from taxable income a portion of the reimbursement from the Company. Taxpayers with modified adjusted gross income less than $214,520 are not subject to any limitations. You will need to determine how your filing status and income level affect the amount that may be excluded from your taxable income. You must make any adjustments that are necessary on your own income tax return.

Taxpayers who incur qualified adoption expenses may be eligible to claim a separate federal income tax credit for the year in which the adoption expenses are incurred. Note that any expenses reimbursed under the Adoption Assistance Program cannot be claimed as an income tax credit. Information concerning the income tax credit is contained in the instructions to IRS Form 8839, available from the Internal Revenue Service.

Also note that you may be reimbursed under the Program for some expenses that are not eligible for the income tax credit. For example, if your modified adjusted gross income is $254,520 or more, you may not be eligible for the income tax credit, but you may still be able to be reimbursed for these expenses under the Program. In this case, however, those reimbursements will generally be taxable to you.
